However, there would still be tides, because the Sun also has a tidal effect, although it only amounts to about half that of the Moon,â€• explains Aksnes. Sat, 17 Nov 2018 22:58:00 GMT What would we do without the moon? | ScienceNordic - Without the moon, a day on earth would only last six to twelve hours. There could be more than a thousand days in one year! That's because the Earth's rotation slows down over time thanks to the gravitational force -- or pull of the moon -- and without it, days would go by in a blink.
